

Nonverbal Personality Questionnaire (NPQ)

Report for:

Sam Sample

Male

December 7, 2025

Introduction

The NPQ was designed to assess personal qualities in terms of a selected number of traits which describe all people to varying degrees. The development of these measures was the result of many years of careful research, systematic investigation, and the accumulation of data from hundreds of people.

This report is based on the responses you made when completing the NPQ. Your scores show how you compare with other people in terms of the characteristics measured by the NPQ. Your unique pattern of high and low scores differentiates you from other individuals. An examination of this pattern may act as a guide to understanding the impact of personal characteristics on work and job satisfaction and on aspects of your daily life.

There are no right or wrong answers to the NPQ, nor is one particular pattern of scores necessarily better than another. The NPQ was not designed to focus on character flaws or deviance, or to highlight maladjustment. Rather, the NPQ simply describes one's characteristics on a number of common traits that reflect certain consistencies in the way one is likely to behave in a wide variety of situations. While NPQ scores can be a valuable tool in personal awareness, results provide only a partial description of your behavior.

A great deal of developmental work went into the NPQ and it is widely respected as a reliable assessment device, but it is important to recognize that no such measure will be one hundred percent accurate. You should evaluate these results in light of all available information.

Your NPQ report is divided into two sections. On the next page, you will find a profile of your NPQ scores. Following pages contain descriptions of the NPQ scales.

NPQ Profile Description

The charts above list your raw scores for each of the NPQ scales, followed by percentile scores that first compare your scores to those of the entire NPQ normative sample, then the females in the normative sample, and finally the males in the normative sample. The male percentiles are also graphed. Your percentile scores show the percentage of people in the normative sample who received a raw score lower than your score.
